A SWEET and tender story of life in Paris, under the shadow of Notre-Dame and at Buttes-Chaumont. There are but few characters, but Miss Waller has given to literature nothing finer than Nanette, the little ragpicker, who never knew a mother and who finds the heart-hunger for one appeased in clinging to the stone pillars of Notre Dame and in the thought that the great Cathedral, "Our Lady of Paris" is to her a mother who comforts and cherishes. "A little white soul," although only a ragpicker's, is laid bare before the reader, and in doing this the author has produced a story that is well nigh faultless.

SUBSTITUTE PRISONER*By MAX MARCINAuthor of "Britz of Headquarters"Illustrated in Color and Half-Tone Colored Jacket*PRICE, $1.25 NET

AN exciting new novel by the author of Britz of Headquarters, in which the shrewd and indomitable Britz, Prince of detectives, again appears, working with his fine skill on a mystery story which, in the suspense and interest contained, has rarely been surpassed.

A middle-aged bookkeeper, out of employment, is cleverly substituted for a post-office thief caught in the act and sentenced to three years' imprisonment. As a fact the real criminal is a man of wealth and prominence, and a letter and not money was the object of his escapade. The circumstances leading up to this hiring of a substitute prisoner, and the complicated events that followed, constitute an extremely exciting and mystifying story. This story ran serially in the People's Magazine under the title of "Everybody's Alibi."

An important and authoritative biography of the great Italian statesman, to whom, more than to any other one man the development of United Italy was due. Fully illustrated from rare and interesting pictures. Two volumes. $7.50 net. Postage extra.

Tarantella

By Edith Macvane. In this stirring novel the author of "The Black Flier" gives a notable picture of actual Italian society. The heroine is an American girl, the victim of an unfortunate marriage in this country, who later in Italy is romantically loved and won by an Italian nobleman. With frontispiece. $1.20 net. Postpaid $1.32.

An American Railroad Builder (J. M. Forbes)

By Henry G. Pearson. The remarkable career of John M. Forbes, while engaged in the work of railroad construction in the Middle West, in the middle of the last century. With portrait. $1.25 net. Postpaid, $1.37.

Girls and Education

By Le Baron R. Briggs. Dean Briggs' new book deals with some of the difficult problems that confront girls and their parents in the field of education. It is in the best sense a book of charm, instruction, and inspiration. $1.00 net. Postpaid $1.07.

Democracy and Poetry

By Francis B. Gummere. Professor Gummere traces the effect of democracy on poetry from the time of Rousseau, Coleridge, Southey, Whitman, and Taine, down to the present day. The book is a notable contribution to literary criticism. $1.50 net. Postpaid $1.63.

Two Boys in a Gyrocar

By K. Kenneth-Brown. This exciting story tells how two ingenious boys compete in a New York to Paris automobile race in a gyrocar which they invented to run, by the aid of the gyroscope principle, upon two wheels. It will appeal strongly to boys of a mechanical turn of mind. Illustrated by WALLACE GOLDSMITH. $1.20 net. Postpaid $1.32.

Criminal Statistics in the United States.

JUST PATTY

By JEAN WEBSTER

"Just Patty" is bubbling over with the delicious humor of Patty in college. Patty is full of the joy of living, fun-loving, given to ingenious mischief for its own sake, with a disregard for petty convention which is an unfailing source of joy to her fellows and of perplexed wonder to the faculty. What she does not think of in the way of mischief at that most select of boarding-schools, St. Ursula's, isn't worth thinking of.

Hiawatha — (Player's Edition)

HENRY W. LONGFELLOW

Introduction by FRANK W. GUNSAULUS, D.D.

A beautiful edition illustrated with unusual photographs by Grace Chandler Horn. Taken from life among the Ojibwas, they give us the very characters, the very scenes so beautifully sung in Longfellow's poem. Minnehaha, Hiawatha, as a baby, a child, and man; the beautiful woods; "the luminous water" are brought before us with startling and life-like vividness. The natural theatre is also shown in which, as a play, Hiawatha was so remarkably given by full-blooded Ojibwa Indians not so long ago over the Canadian border. From this representation the edition takes its name. Frontispiece of Minnehaha and eight full pages tinted. Fifty-six half-tones. Cloth (boxed) $2.00

Randall Parrish's Latest Novel

My Lady of Doubt

ON a certain evening in 1778, the British troops assembled in Philadelphia for a grand ball, their resplendent uniforms sharing the light of a thousand candelabras with the gay costumes of loyalist women and officers' wives. At Valley Forge, a few miles away, with little to cover them but the cold sky, lay Washington and his half starved troops. On this same night Major Lawrence of the American Army, spying out the disposition of troops in Philadelphia, rescues an unknown lady from a slight predicament. The hope of further acquaintance—a hope encouraged by his fair debtor—lures him to the dangerous enterprise of attending the ball instead of leaving town. How the lady recognizes him, helps him out of a trap which a jealous and suspicious British officer sets for him, how he escapes Philadelphia after a fight, and how this mysterious lady turns up at more than one vital moment in the days following—always in situations that add to her mystery—are told in Mr. Parrish's inimitable interest-sustaining manner. As a background to the thrilling and charming drama of these two intertwining lives, is the larger, sombre unfolding of the most momentous struggle in our history.

THE ART OF DOING WITHOUT

A Sermonette for Booksellers

THE art of "doing without" is a valuable possession for those who in this life have but little and look for nothing more. It is helpful to the dyspeptic in the consideration of foods and to the thirsty in deciding what to shun. The art of "doing without" has a certain value in the realm of sociology, but when it comes to the business world it has very serious limitations. In this age of economic stress and strife, "doing without" in the commercial field often means digging a rut, and as has been wisely remarked, the only difference between a groove and a grave, is one of depth.

In the book-business, for instance, a dealer cannot afford to "do without" a modern catalog equipment. The tools of the trade are so necessary he cannot possibly afford to economize in this direction. The bookseller who tries to "do without" an up-to-date index catalog is very improperly equipped for business. Half the number of books inquired for in bookstores, it is estimated, are those which have been published within three years; two-thirds are those which have been published within six years; and fully 90% are titles which have been either first published or were re-issued in new editions in the last decade.

You as a live bookseller, now, therefore cannot afford to "do without" the recent volumes of the "American Catalog," especially the three that cover the period from 1900 to 1910. These three volumes will enable your clerk to answer intelligently practically every inquiry concerning "books in print," helping you to make new customers as well as to hold the old ones.

"Doing without" is digging a rut a little deeper.

Here is the equipment we offer:

1. THE "AMERICAN CATALOG" 1900-1904 (five years in one alphabet), $7.50. Only fifteen copies left.
2. THE "AMERICAN CATALOG" 1905-1907 (a three year cumulation), $7.50. Only forty-five copies left.

LEADERS OF ALL NON-FICTION

READY THIS MONTH

By Brigadier-General FREDERICK FUNSTON

Memories of Two Wars

Illustrated. $3.00 net; postpaid $3.30.

In describing his service in the Cuban insurgent army and in the United States army in the Philippines, General Funston gives a vigorous, graphic narrative of hard fighting in picturesque surroundings, often against hidden enemies and heavy odds. In tracing these two campaigns, he necessarily recounts his own military career—one probably unequalled by any living soldier for its romantic brilliancy.

JUST OUT

The Poems of Henry Van Dyke

Complete in one volume. With portrait. 8vo. $2.00 net; postpaid $2.20.

HENRY VAN DYKE won his place among the best-read and loved of American poets. Of his earlier books of verse more than 60,000 copies have been sold. The clearness and melody of the nature-songs, the interest of the narratives, the deep feeling of the romantic and patriotic lyrics have found friends for this hopeful and human poetry even in an age of prose. A significant event in American literature is the collection of his work in verse, with many new pieces, and their publication in this volume.

Recollections, Grave and Gay

Illustrated. 8vo. About $2.50 net; postage extra.

The South Before the War, the War itself, New York Society after the War; the author, formerly Miss Constance Cary, of the Virginia Carys, wife of Burton Harrison, Jefferson Davis's secretary; her relationship with prominent families of the North gave her singularly impartial judgments; her residence in Richmond made her a spectator of great events, and often a participant in them.

By CHARLES SHELDON

The Wilderness of the Upper Yukon

A Hunter's Explorations for Wild Sheep in Sub-Arctic Mountains

With 4 illustrations in color from paintings by CARL RUNGIUS, and 70 illustrations from photographs. $3.00 net; postage extra.

The thrilling experiences in pursuit of the big game, sheep, caribou, moose, bear, etc., the delightful descriptions of magnificent scenery, the keen and sympathetic observations of the life of the smaller animals of the region form a rare and valuable narrative. The illustrations, of which there are more than seventy, are superb.

By ERNEST THOMPSON SETON

The Arctic Prairies

Plentifully illustrated with sketches, photographs, and maps by the Author.
About $2.00 net; postage extra.

He tells of a journey—virtually one of discovery—into the so-called "Barren Lands" of North-West British America, the region of "Great Slave Lake," and partly within the Arctic Circle; and he shows that these regions are misnamed—that in fact they are vast prairies over which great herds of big game roam.

NOTES IN SEASON.

CASSELL & COMPANY announce the fifth printing since June 1, of Pierre de Coulevain's "The Unknown Isle."

THE CENTURY COMPANY have ready a new book by the author of "When Patty Went to College." Miss Jean Webster's latest story, "Just Patty," tells of what that fun-loving, delightfully mischievous young person did at St. Ursula's, a most select boarding-school.

WILLIAM BLAKE'S "Songs of Innocence" has come to us from the press of Dana Estes & Company, of Boston, in an edition of rough thick pages with wide designed margins. There are colored plates by Honor C. Appleton.

RAND, McNALLY & COMPANY call the attention of the trade to their particularly attractive list of juveniles for the holiday season. They have also a handsome Player's edition of "Hiawatha," illustrated from unusual photographs by Grace Chandler Horn.

DURING the month from August 19 to September 19, the Book Supply Company reports that 11,293 copies of Harold Bell Wright's "The Winning of Barbara Worth" have been sold. This is the report received from 100 of the leading retail booksellers of the country, and the orders are still coming in.

THE OPEN COURT PUBLISHING COMPANY calls attention to Arthur Drews' "The Christ Myth," a scientific and well-documented study in comparative religion; and "The Mysteries of Mithra," by Franz Cumont, a treatise on the origin and history of the Mithraic religion, showing how and why it failed to become the dominant religion of the Roman Empire.

ELLA BROADUS ROBERTSON'S "The Heart of the Bible" will be issued October 20 by Thomas Nelson & Sons. The book is specially prepared for young people, parents and teachers and gives a complete grasp of the Bible, and contains all the principal stories and events of the scriptures in their historical order, told in the language of the Bible itself.

THE PENN PUBLISHING COMPANY have three news books ready: "Rosmary for Remembrance," by Helen Sherman Griffith, tells of the healing of family feud, when the young people of the two houses concerned fall in love with each other; "Grandma," by Elizabeth Lincoln Gould, is the story of a dear old lady whose sweetness and kindness conquer the unneighborly, purse-proud city people she goes to visit; and "College Comedies," by Edwin Bateman Morris, a volume of four plays entitled, respectively, "The Freshman," "The Sophomore," "The Junior," and "The Senior."

OCTOBER 14 is the publication day announced by A. C. McClurg & Company for Mrs. Carter Harrison's new book of fairy stories, "The Glittering Festival," and for Randall Parrish's "My Lady of Doubt," a tale of the Revolution and the occupation of Philadelphia by the British, with a mysterious heroine and a brave American officer playing adventurous parts in those stirring times. Already a second edition has been necessary of Marjorie Benton Cooke's "Dr. David," a vital story of city streets and of mountain tops, of real men and women, and some of the issues of to-day. This firm is also the publisher of "Emerson's Wife," by Florence Finch Kelly, a collection of short stories full of the picturesque color of the vanishing West.

Carver, T. Nixon.

Principles of rural economics. Bost., Ginn, [11.] (O14) c. 20+386 p. (7 p. bibl.) diagrs., $1.30.

A new book on a phase of agriculture which has as yet been little exploited in textbook literature. It differs from other books on agriculture mainly in its discussion of every problem from the standpoint of national economy rather than from the standpoint of the individual farmer. Instead of explaining to the latter how to grow crops and make his farm pay, the author takes up such questions as the place of agriculture in national prosperity; the characteristics of rural life; the significance of rural as distinguished from urban civilization. Author is David A. Wells, professor of political economy in Harvard University.

Chadbourne, Carolyn Mirriam, ["S. I. Mayma," pseud.]

Man's relation to invisible forces. N. Y., Roger Bros., '11. (O14) c. 155 p. front. 12°, $1.50.

Charades, by an idle man. Bost., Little, Brown, '11. (O14) c. no paging, D. $1 n.

"One hundred ingenious charades, which range from the simple ones of four lines to the more complicated ones of three or four verses. It is usually a point of honor with a charade guesser to solve his problem without help, but lest the solution of some of these should prove too baffling, the author has appended a "key" by which one may check up the answers.

Chaucer, Geoffrey.

Poems; selections from his earlier and later works; ed., with introd., biographical and grammatical notes and glossary, by Oliver Marrar Emerson. N. Y., Macmillan, '11. (O14) c. 58+257 p. 16°, 80 c. n.

Cherbuliez, Charles Victor.

Le Comte Kostia; adapt., with notes, exercises, and vocab., by T. H. Bertenshaw. Auth. ed. N. Y., Longmans, '11. (O14) 126 p. S. (Longman's French texts, advanced ser.) 20 c.; Teacher's ed. 25 c. Editor is assistant master in the city of London School.

Child, R. Washburn.

The man in the shadow. N. Y., Macmillan, '11. (O14) c. '06-'11. 7+372 p. pls. D. $1.25 n.

Coleridge, S. Taylor.

Biographia epistolaries; being the biographical supplement of Coleridge's Biographia literaria; with additional letters, etc.: ed. by A. Turnbull. In 2 v. N. Y., Macmillan, '11. (O14) c. 24+300; 8+351 p. bibl. 12°, (Bohn lib.) ea., $1 n.

Collins, Fs. Arnold.

The second boy's book of model aeroplanes; il. with many photographs and diagrams by the author. N. Y., Century Co., '11. (O14) c. 11+262 p. D. $1.20 n.

This book brings up to date the science and sport of model aeroplane construction and flying, both in this country and abroad, and is a successor to the author's earlier successes in the same field, "The boys' book of model aeroplanes." Mr. Collin writes only of results which he has actually worked out with his own hands, and helped and seen American lads he knows work out; and so his instructions are simple, definite, and practically helpful. Table of aeronautical terms.

Duncan, Rob. Kennedy.

Some chemical problems of to-day. N. Y.

Harper, '11. (O14) c. 253 p. pls. O. $2 n.

By the author of "The chemistry of commerce." Professor Duncan, in this book for the average reader, shows how chemical invention is getting away from the purely scientific into the wider fields of every-day problems. The subject is one of importance in this country, where the relations between chemistry and manufacture have not been as close as elsewhere—Germany, for instance. Our universities and technical institutions have not yet learned to work with our factories. The first chapter of the work forms an introduction to the entire book, which progresses logically from the scientific theories to specific illustrations of the way chemical inventions affect the markets of the world. Chemistry, as we now know it, is a modern science.

Ebenezer Rockwood Hoar: a memoir. Bost., Houghton Mifflin, '11. (O14) c. 355 p. por. O. $1.50 n.

In New England of the nineteenth century there were few more interesting and important personalities than that of Judge Rockwood Hoar of Concord and Boston, a jurist, public man and wit of national reputation, and an intimate friend of Lowell, Emerson and their circle. The method of the biography that has been prepared by Mr. Storey and Dr. Emerson is anecdotal rather than formal, and it contains so many of Judge Hoar's witticisms, so much of his own personal flavor, that it is a readable and entertaining book. At the same time, it has historical value, particularly in the light it throws upon the period immediately preceding the Civil War. Index.

Felton, Mrs. W: H.

My memoirs of Georgia politics; it was her husband's request that she should collect and publish the story of his congressional and legislative life as connected with Georgia politics, from 1874, during more than twenty years of public service in state and national legislation. Atlanta, Ga., A. B. Caldwell, '11. (O14) 8+680 p. pls. pors. Q. $2.50.

The book begins with the author's early recollections of national politics—before there were railroads, telegraphs or telephones. As she lived through the war, and was a keen observer of current events, she has given us her opinions on men and measures with frankness and with keen perception of surrounding conditions. Her husband's controversies with the most prominent of Georgia's politicians, the story of the Fraudulent Bonds of Georgia and the history of the Reformatory movement in the Georgia Legislature, are all faithfully reported. There are incidents never before narrated, and plain speaking as to men and their motives.

Jane Dawson; a novel. N. Y., Harper, '11. (O14) c. 363 p. front. D. $1.30 n.

The author of "Pole Baker," "Dixie Hart," etc., writes a story here of Jane Dawson and her son, who does not know who his father was. Revival meetings, and the call of Olin Dwight to the ministry, have to do with a large part of the plot—while Jane's son, George Dawson, wins Myra Chapman whom Olin wished to marry. The scene is typical of a certain kind of community in Georgia.

Harrison, Mrs. Mary St. Leger Kingsley ["Lucas Malet," pseud.]

Adrian Savage; a novel. N. Y., Harper, '11. (O14) c. 469 p. D. $1.35 n.

After long silence the author of "Sir Richard Calmady" describes a totally different hero. Adrian Savage was the only child of an English physician and a French mother distinguished as a poetess and inherited business ability and a romantic temperament. He is in love with a French widow of intellectual ability. In settling the estate for an English cousin, she, a woman of forty, falls in love with him, and a great part of the story is devoted to her diary of her feelings. All works out well and the psychological problems are absorbing.

Hill, F: Trevor.

On the trail of Grant and Lee; a narrative history of the boyhood and manhood of two great Americans; based upon their own writings, official records, and other authoritative information; il. in col. by Arth. E. Becher. N. Y., Appleton, '11. (O14) c. 14+305 p. O. $1.50 n.

Author of "On the trail of Washington," "Lincoln, the lawyer," etc. here traces the interwoven careers of Grant and Lee from boyhood to manhood, with the idea of showing that each in his way was a very great American, and that all Americans should be equally proud of them both. Nearly all of the large amount of writing about these two great soldiers has been from a partisan, or at least a prejudiced, standpoint, offering a warped, if not erroneous views of the characters of both men. The author presents the facts clearly and simply, without fear or favor. The story of the campaigns is told as simply as it can be, with proper regard for entire accuracy.

Social France in the XVII century; with 12 illustrations. N. Y., Macmillan, '11. (O14) 13+321 p. (4 p. bibl.) pls. fold. tab., O. $3 n.

Author is Sometime Scholar of Somerville College, Oxford. The aim of this book has been to represent the general aspect of the country in a few rough strokes. It deals with the minor ideals and hopes of mankind which form the principal difference between one age and another. The political history of the period is so complicated and yet so closely bound up with the domestic life of the nation that a brief historical introduction is given as necessary. This summary is meant to serve as a help to the understanding of social conditions which would otherwise be unintelligible.

The steel crown. N. Y., Dillingham, [11.] (O14) c. 333 p. D. $1.25 n.

Hale, a young solicitor, meets Miss Weston the daughter of an English naval captain at the time of the murder of a Mrs. Brance who is stopping in her boarding house. Mrs. Brance, formerly an opera singer of continental reputation, married Eszek, King of Darra, a petty kingdom of the Balkan States, who was subsequently murdered by his subjects. When she fled the country she carried with her the steel crown and jewels of great value. According to tradition no king could ascend the throne of Darra unless crowned with the steel circlet. Twin nephews of the murdered king are next in succession. These are Jeckle and Michael Eszek. Jeckle, the elder by fifteen minutes is, by arrangement of the powers, made regent, pending a final settlement of affairs in the disturbed kingdom. It is further agreed that either of the nephews becoming possessed of the crown and treasure shall be made King of Darra.

Franz Liszt. N. Y., Scribner, '11. (O14) c. 458 p. D. $2 n.

Author is art editor of the New York Sun and has written "Chopin." This biography is called forth by Liszt's centenary. It begins with a critique by the author, who is an authority on music, and then proceeds with an account of his subject's wonderfully romantic life. A full list of Liszt's numerous and distinguished pupils is given, and the judgments of his works' performance by men themselves famous constitute an interesting feature of the volume.

James, H.

The outcry. N. Y., Scribner, '11. (O14) c. 261 p. D. $1.25 n.

"The outcry" is the protest in England over its selling so many of its art treasures to rich Americans. The story deals with Lady Grace, daughter of Lord Theign, who, simple, true and with no false pride, loves the art treasures in her father's house as representatives of generations of culture. Her sister's heavy card debts to the Duchess, mother of Lord John, makes her desire her sister's acquiescence to Lord John's suit. However, Lord Theign has no money for Lady Grace's marriage portion.

and it became necessary to sell a picture to the rich American, Mr. Bender. Just here Hugh Crimble, a young connoisseur, enters the scene and pronounces a Moretto a Montavno. He and Lady Grace protest against her father's sale of the picture, and learning Lord John's encouragement of the sale she refuses to marry him. Things end very happily for England, Lord Theign and Lady Grace.

The house on the mall. N. Y., Dillingham, ['11.] (O14) c. 304 p. front. D. $1.25 n.

The author of "Admirable tinker," "Lady Noggs Peeress," etc. writes here of a daring robbery committed in a fashionable London neighborhood. Lady Aldington returning alone at midnight from a bridge-party is about to open the door of her brougham to step out in front of her own door, when she is throttled and lifted back into the brougham. Another man drags the chauffeur off his seat, throttles him and lifts him inside the brougham. A third leaps into the chauffeur's place and starts the car. Both victims are bound and gagged, and Lady Aldington is robbed of her jewels, tiara, and necklace. The brougham is driven twenty-five miles into the country and left in a grove. Lady Aldington and her chauffeur are discovered the next morning by a laborer who liberates them.

Jewett, Sarah Orne.

Letters of Sarah Orne Jewett; ed. by Annie Fields. Bost., Houghton Mifflin, '11. (O14) c. 259 p. pors. facsim. D. $1.50 n.

Miss Jewett, whose position of distinction among the women writers of America is undisputed, was an admirable letter writer. Her familiar letters to her intimate friends are full of charm; dealing as they do with her daily interests, her reading, her opinions, her friendships and travels, they present a picture of the writer's life that will be of most profound interest to the thousands of lovers of her books. The letters have been edited by Mrs. James T. Fields, who, as a life-long friend of Miss Jewett, is peculiarly qualified for the task. The book has three portraits and a facsimile manuscript.

The marriage portion; a novel. Bost., Small, Maynard, ['11.] (O14) c. 423 p. D. $1.35 n.

The scene of this book is laid in a New England college town called New Town. It deals primarily with the "marriage portion" dealt out to a good many husbands and wives in the community. The plot centers around a young widow, Mrs. Cleaves, whose keen interest in life attracts various people to her and leads them to confide in her. Her own decision not to marry again is at last overruled in spite of her abhorrence of the kind of marriages and their failures or half successes which she sees around her. By the author of the "Road to Damascus," "He that eateth bread with me," etc.

Cap'n Warren's wards; il. by Edm. Frederick. N. Y., Appleton, '11. (O14) c. 379 p. D. $1.30 n.

Author of "Mr. Pratt," "Cap'n Eri," "Woman haters," etc., brings his hero from a small town on Cape Cod to New York to look after his wards Caroline and Stephen. Cap'n Warren finds them used to every kind of luxury and surrounded by false as well as true friends. He is not loved very much at first on account of his blunt, old fashioned ways, but he wins his place with them and makes his own circle of friends in his kindly, breezy way. To show his wards the things really worth while, he makes them believe they are poor, and they give New York life up to come to Cape Cod with him. A fortune-hunter, who had been making love to Caroline goes away, as Cap'n Warren had planned he should, and Caroline, at the end of the book, finds herself rich, loving her uncle, and also the "right man."

Louisa of Tuscany.

My own story, by Louisa of Tuscany, ex-Crown Princess of Saxony; tr. under the supervision of the author; with 19 illustrations. N. Y., Putnam, '11. (O14) c. 367 p. O. $3.50 n.

Princess Louisa gives for the first time her statement of the events which led up to her sensational escape from the Court of Saxony, and her meeting with M. Giron with whom scandal had connected her name. The intrigue and plots of court life are revealed in way that shows how difficult existence is for royalty, particularly in small principalities. There is much of interest about the early life of the Princess and her brothers, and also of the private history of her various Hapsburg relatives.

The fair Irish maid. N. Y., Harper, '11. (O14) c. 3+354 p. D. $1.30 n.

An Irish story, the scene laid in Kerry, Ireland, with not only much of the romantic superstition of the region, but also a good deal of political interest woven in the tale. Grania O'Hara, the last of a noble race, who lost their fortunes for their religious convictions, finds herself unexpectedly with unlimited wealth and a newly-found lover with which to shape anew her life. That the wealth does not spoil her, and she holds her lover in loyalty is the main theme of the book, woven in with an unexpected mystery which lends an extra force to the plot. By the author of "If I were king," "Seraphica," etc.

Mathews, J: Lathrop.

The log of the "Easy Way"; il. from photographs by the author. Bost., Small, Maynard, ['11.] (O14) c. 12+268 p. O. $1.50 n.

Mr. Mathews and his bride built a small "shanty-boat," or house-boat, and, going on board the day of their marriage, drifted down the Chicago Drainage Canal, down the Illinois River, and then on down the Mississippi to New Orleans, living a life of idyllic charm for four or five months. Here and there they had adventures, and they found plenty to interest them in every mile of the journey. Mr. Mathews has put all these things into his narrative. You come to know, as if at first hand, the life of the river world, and it is always picturesque.

Miller, Ja. Russell, D.D.

The beauty of self-control. N. Y., Crowell, '11. (O14) c. 290 p. D. $1 n.

A cue to the line of thought herein developed is contained in the following extract: "Perfect self-control is ideal life. A man has self-control when he sits in his place and has his hands on all the reins of life. He is kingly when he has complete mastery of his temper, his speech, his appetites; when he can be quiet under injury and wrong; when he can stand amid temptations and not yield to them." The author demonstrates his belief in a particularly lucid way, aiming throughout to inspire his readers to achieve the ideal life which he describes. By the author of "Beauty of everyday," and other books on religious life.

Moses, Belle.

Charles Dickens and his girl heroines. N. Y., Appleton, '11. (O14) c. 7+331 p. por. D. $1.25 n.

By the author of "Louisa May Alcott," etc. Nowhere does Dickens' art shine forth more tenderly, more beautifully and more truly, than in the creation of his girl heroines. Here he showed the skill of the sculptor—in the simple grace with which he endowed even the humblest of his girls, and it is chiefly in connection with this side of his many-sided character and genius that the author views the man in this new book, hoping to present him to girl readers—if not in a new light—at least with the glow of the deep and kindly interest, and the gentle courtesy which always marked his intercourse with girls in his books.

Moses, Montrose Jonas.

The American dramatist. Bost., Little, Brown, '11. (O14) c. 338 p. (12 p. bibl.) por. O. $2.50 n.

By the author of "Literature of the South," "Henrik Ibsen," etc. This book will appeal to all those interested in the drama as such, and in the development of the American dramatist and his work. The author dedicates his book to three of the best known writers—Bronson Howard, James A. Herne and Clyde Fitch. He has spent several years in the acquirement of his material, which has been most difficult of access, since we have only recently thought of preserving such work in permanent form.

Openshaw, Mary.

The loser pays; a story of the French Revolution. Bost., Small, Maynard, '11. (O14) c. 345 p. D. $1.25 n.

Author of "The cross of honour," here tells a story of the French Revolution and the Terror. Little Louis de Lisle lives with his grandmother in the country, only seeing his father occasionally. One day he is dressed in black and taken to his grandmother, who tells him his father is dead; but, in reality, he has only thrown in his lot with the people, thus outraging his aristocratic mother. He has also written the Marseillaise. The old lady takes the boy to Paris where they meet with many disasters, even being imprisoned in the Abbaye. Louis has an encounter with Napoleon and is finally united with his father. The story is told by Louis, when an old man.

Penfield, E:

Spanish sketches. N. Y., Scribner, '11. (O14) c. '06-'11. 146 p. col. il. O. bds., $2.50 n., boxed.

With his pen and his brush Mr. Penfield, as in his "Holland sketches," has here caught and reproduced the very life and spirit of Spain. He has vividly expressed the charm of that romantic land, so full of grace, beauty, and color. You journey with him pleasantly through city and country, he pointing out much that is picturesque, lovely, or amusing the average traveller would have overlooked. You see beautiful signoras, you view brilliant bull-fights, you see the peasants with their donkeys, the little swarthy soldiers—all that is characteristic. The pictures are all in color.

Potter, D:

I fasten a bracelet; with a front. [in col.] by Martin Justice. Phil., Lippincott, '11. (O14) c. 273 p. D. $1.25 n.

Why should a well-bred girl be under a vow of obedience to a man after she has broken her engagement to him? This is the mysterious situation that is presented in this story, the scene of which is laid in the Berkshires. Craig Schuyler comes back from Sumatra, after four years, and assumes absolute control over Ellen Sutphen and her mother. Misunderstandings and false accusations have caused this strange state of affairs which are cleared away at the end of the breezy tale.

Price, W: Raleigh.

The symbolism of Voltaire's novels with special reference to Zadig. N. Y., [Lemcke & B.,] '11. (O14) c. 6+265 p. (4 p. bibl.) D. (Columbia Univ. studies in romance, philology and literature.) $1.50 n.

The author believes that if the significance of Voltaire's novels is not in the sources, that it consists in his symbolism. The names of the characters, the identification of the characters, the interpretation of the purpose of the author, of his allusions, of his Allegories, are all phases of one and the same question—his symbolism. The problem is one of psychological analysis; the method is a painstaking search for data; the data furnished by Voltaire's works in fifty large octavo volumes.

The jinx; stories of the diamond; il. by F. R. Gruger, and others. N. Y., Dillingham, [11.] (O14) c. 311 p. D. $1.25 n.

The story that gives the book its title is of a clever but underpaid third baseman and a pretty but cross-eyed girl. Refused a raise in salary by the club owner the ball player invites his landlady's daughter, Nona O'Hara, to the ball game, where her cross eyes put such a hoodoo, or jinx, on the Pioneers that they lose consecutively and drop to fourth place. The owner finally offers a reward to any player who can chase the jinx. Third-baseman Dasher wins it and uses the money to have Nona's eyes straightened, afterward marrying her. Other stories: Break in training; The ringer; In Dutch; Indian sign; Foul tip; Post post-season game.

The incorrigible Dukane; il. by Stanley L. Wood. Bost., Small, Maynard, '11. (O14) c. 359 p. D. $1.25 n.

Jimmy Dukane had spent his twenty-odd years in doing just as he pleased in a most expensive manner. His father at last refused to settle any more debts and shipped him to Melton, Ariz., with $100 and orders to inspect a dam being constructed there by Dukane & Co., and report upon it. The first night he is in Melton, a tramp steals Jimmy's clothes and money, leaving his own tattered garments in their place. Young Dukane goes out to the dam as a day laborer, no one believing his story as to who he is. He finds the superintendent indulging in very crooked work and sets himself to exposing him and saving the dam from scamp labor. He succeeds after some exciting times, proves he is something more than an irresponsible, slangy idler, wins the girl he loves and his father's respect.

The Publishers' Weekly

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT

October 14, 1911

The editor is not responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

Publishers should send books promptly for weekly record and descriptive annotation, if possible in advance of publication. The Record of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

APPRAISAL OF COPYRIGHT.

Two recent appraisals of copyright for inheritance tax purposes have brought before the trade and the public the interesting question of value and valuation of copyrights as property. The copyrights of Mrs. Eddy, in her Christian Science writings, not inclusive of the periodicals of the Christian Science Church, were appraised at the enormous amount of $1,400,000, and an inheritance tax was paid by her estate on that amount. No explanation of the method of reaching this valuation has been made, but it is known that both the sales of her books and the prices obtained for them were very large, so that the income was absolutely exceptional. In the other case the copyrights of the novels of the late Marion Crawford were valued by the tax authorities of the State of New York at approximately $40,000, including $10,000 for the dramatic rights in his last work. This valuation, it was stated by the Deputy Comptroller of the State, was based on "the method of appraisal followed by the largest publishers in this country, derived from an old English custom"—involving a capitalization representing the sum of royalty for three years preceding the author's death on books published during his life, whether before or within the three-year period, and the royalty for the first year of publication on posthumous works. It is rather curious that this custom of the trade is not known to publishers, so far as we have made inquiry, and that there is no basis for it in practice except under limited circumstances with respect to school books. Where a standard school book is of steady and permanent sale, three years returns have not infrequently been taken as the basis of valuation. But this does not apply to other school books and is quite inapplicable to books in the general field. A "big seller" may practically exhaust its sales within the first year of publication, though this is not necessarily the case. As to the three-year period, a proper valuation would differ mightily, according to whether the sales during the three years were increasing or decreasing each year. In short, the valuation of any book must be made individual in connection with all the circumstances of its sale, and so far as we can see no generalization is possible.

These two incidents call attention to the whole question of the valuation of copyrights in their several relations. There is no greater pitfall for a publisher who desires that his bookkeeping accounts shall represent the actual conditions of his business than the mistaken practice of keeping copyrights and plates on his books of account at original costs or valuations, without large writing-off for depreciation. In most cases these values are diminishing quantities and diminishing often to the vanishing point. While it is true that copyrights, like patents, are to be counted as assets under the bankruptcy laws, it is difficult to see how there can be any fair taxation of intangible property on which there may be no realization whatever. When a publisher imports an English edition with royalty arrangement on sales payable to the author or on his account, it would be quite without warrant that such royalties should be charged up as a part of the cost of the importation; and this view has hitherto been accepted by the custom authorities. All questions of taxation of personal property are difficult enough, but the taxation of copyrights, whether in the hands of author or publisher, is perhaps most difficult of all and has least basis of justice. Even when a publisher has purchased a copyright "outright," and thus made a definite valuation of it, the value of the purchase is probably steadily diminished except in the case of a few authors of standard and sometimes increasing sales. That publisher is wise who makes the fullest allowance of depreciation for all copyright properties, and it may safely be held that copyrights are immaterial and unrealized property which cannot rightly be made the basis of taxation of any kind.

THE decision as to the importation of leather-bound books, however absurd in esse, was not altogether unexpected. The Appraisers' Court felt bound to follow the letter of the law despite the sound argument of the dissenting member to the effect that literature and leather were quite different things. The clause sneaked into the tariff bill imposing a higher duty where the value was not chiefly of paper, in accordance with the duty on the binding material, as leather or silk, is a thorough absurdity—but there it stands in the law among other absurdities. The new ruling, which the Secretary of the Treasury had sought to avoid by cutting the Gordian knot with the sword of common sense—in which he had been properly followed by Collector Loeb—will have a deterrent effect on the importation in the best form of some of the best books, as the Oxford and other English Bibles and prayer books, and the leather bound editions of Everyman's Library and other series of standard merit. Doubtless this absurdity will be remedied at the next opportunity for tariff revision, if a Democratic Congress and a Republican President can come together in the interest of decent and effective tariff revision.

HIGH BINDING DUTY AFFIRMED.

In a divided opinion the Board of United States General Appraisers Tuesday held that books bound in leather are to be classified under the present tariff act as "manufactures of leather, or of which leather is the component material of chief value." Under this interpretation of the law, books are called upon to pay the high tax of 40 per cent. ad valorem. In the test case brought before the board the Bowling Green Storage and Van Company appear as the protestants, but the entire American importing book trade is directly affected.

Judge McClelland writes the majority decision, which is coincided in by Judge Chamberlain. Judge Sharretts, in a long opinion, dissents. Recently the Treasury Department issued a circular to the officers of customs to the effect that books should be admitted at 25 per cent. under the terms of paragraph 416, which provides for "books of all kinds, bound or unbound, wholly or chief value of paper," unless it was shown that the bindings were of such a costly character as to make it reasonably certain that the books had been purchased on account of their bindings. In the present case no such claim was advanced either by the customs officials or the importers.

The majority opinion, while terming the department's circular as "expressing a learned opinion" regarding the Congressional intent in framing the law, holds that it is not controlling. It is accordingly held that as the leather bindings are of greater value than the printed paper contents, the books are properly dutiable at 40 per cent. as in chief value of leather. On the other hand, Judge Sharretts's dissenting opinion takes the view that books, being the highest type of civilization, have always been treated leniently by American tariff framers. Judge Sharretts says in part:

"Dickens would hardly have been flattered had he been told that the principal value of his books was in their covers. Classification dependent upon the respective values of books and their bindings will result in constant litigation involving the almost hopeless task of establishing with any degree of certainty facts upon which to predicate a decision, for who is there wise enough to determine the precise value of the time and labor expended by the author who prepared the matter contained in the printed paper books before it had been bound, a prerequisite in the determination of which is the greater value, the paper book so prepared or the piece of leather covering it." Judge Sharretts holds the importers' contention for duty at 25 per cent. to be sound.

HAMPTON'S-COLUMBIAN-STERLING IN TROUBLE.

FOLLOWING an investigation by the Post Office Department of negotiations that preceded the formation of the Columbian-Sterling Publishing Company, of 66 West 35th Street, New York, Federal Grand Jury subpoenas were issued Thursday for the production of the books of the Columbian Magazine Publishing Company. These subpoenas have been served upon five officers and associates of the old Columbian management at the instance of the post office inspectors, alleging misuse of the mails for fraudulent purposes, and on Friday two of those served appeared before the Grand Jury with Assistant District Attorney Brown. They were Frank Orff, president and general manager of the Columbian-Sterling Company, and J. F. B. Atkin, a Philadelphia attorney, counsel for the old Columbian Company before it was merged.

President Orff brought with him to the Grand Jury room a package which he said comprised all of the accounts of the old publishing concern, and these he turned over to the District Attorney's office.

Despite the ready compliance of these two people, it became known that at least two of the officers of the Columbian Magazine Publishing Company for whom subpoenas were issued have removed themselves beyond the jurisdiction of the Federal court here, and have been so removed since trouble was started three weeks ago over the grievances of the preferred stock holders in Hampton's Incorporated.

Regarding these grievances, the New York morning Sun for October 3 says: "Stockholders in Hampton's, whose preferred stock was supposed to be entitled to cumulative 7 per cent. dividends, had hardly finished paying for their shares at the rate of $5 par when they were informed that the control of their magazine had passed to this new company. They were then asked to make an exchange of stock. For their $5 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock they were told they might have $2.50 worth of common stock in the new concern, which, by the way, so far has no preferred stock. This didn't strike many of the Hampton stockholders favorably, and the result was that many of them kicked and kicked hard." On August 2 a communication was sent the preferred stockholders of the old company, offering an exchange of stock in the new company on a 10 per cent. basis. Following this, the Sun says, "the Columbian-Sterling Company had a little new stock to sell. It was an issue of $250,000 for the purchase of a printing plant in New York (the Winthrop Press). The company said that it thought it really ought to ask a little more for this, hence the price to stockholders would have to be $1.25 a share. Just now the curb brokers are offering Columbian-Sterling stock with dividend rights at 75 cents a share and Hampton's at $3.50." The Sun's article, and a succeeding one published next day, was lengthy, and makes interesting reading in magazine finance.

The sheriff put a keeper on Friday last week in the office of the Columbian-Sterling Publishing Company, at 66 West 35th Street, on an execution for $393 in favor of one of the creditors, and levy was also made on office furniture under an attachment in favor of another creditor, and has set down a notice of sale for next Tuesday, unless the execution is settled in the meantime.

The attorneys both for the creditors and for the present management of the Hampton-Columbian Magazine held another long conference in the office of Kellogg & Emery, at 52 Broadway, who are acting as counsel for 50 per cent. of the creditors. At the close of the conference, Frederick R. Kellogg, of the law firm, said that it was confidently believed that the difficulties of Hampton's Magazine would be solved within a short time.

Nevertheless, application was later made for the appointment of a receiver in bankruptcy, which was granted, in respect to the Hampton-Columbian combination, and it is stated that the books in the hands of the Federal Grand Jury show a large stock deficit, and that there are no funds in hand to issue the November numbers of the periodicals. A. Gordon Murray was appointed the temporary receiver for twenty days. Under the sheriff's proceedings a sale was announced for October 17, but this will probably be estopped by the bankruptcy proceedings.

BOOKBINDERS' STRIKE ENDS.

THE strike of the bookbinders, which went into effect early last week, involving 1200 men, to enforce an average wage increase of 10 per cent., has been settled. Some of the strikers returned to work last Saturday and the remainder last Monday. Concessions were made on both sides.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

(Special Correspondence to the London Bookseller and the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY.)

THANKS to two noble ladies who have absconded from the palaces to which they were respectively attached, our dull season has proved rather fertile in sensations. The "Confessions" of Princess Louise of Saxony are already in the hands of all those who care to read them. They have been published in book form in several languages, and are running, or have run, through divers journals and magazines in various countries. A slab of them is served up to me every morning at my breakfast table, with a footnote at the bottom threatening with heavy penalties whomsoever shall dare to infringe the copyright. The "Confessions" have disturbed the serenity of many serene highnesses, and are not looked upon favorably in more exalted court circles, but I find it difficult to feel much sympathy with the distressed heroine, and am not greatly concerned to learn that German princelets are certainly no better, if not rather worse, than "your even Christian."

"La Gioconda," the other lady who disappeared from a palace, has not been heard from up to the present. We are not likely to have her confessions, nor even the confession of the seducer who persuaded her to leave her quiet home in the Louvre and go with him in quest of adventures. But her portraits sell by thousands, and the celebrated "ineffable smile" must be known to millions who never gazed upon the original. Some one has even discovered that a Russian author with the not easily pronounced name of Merikowsky had written a book, which has now been translated into French, entitled "Le Roman de Leonard de Vinci" (Calmann-Lévy), in which, naturally, there is a good deal about the lady over whose portrait the great artist is said to have spent four years' labor.

But La Gioconda is now forgotten—except at the Louvre—and apart from these two incidents, Paris has been very quiet. August and September are always quiet months in the book trade, and as hardly a drop of rain fell during those months, people wanted very little to read except art guide-books and local histories. M. Laurens added to his interesting collection of Celebrated Art Cities a volume on "Dresde, Freiberg and Meissen," by G. Servièrès, and neat little handbooks on Mont St. Michel, the Cathedral of Lyons, and the Château d'Anet.

The mention of Lyons reminds me that the second city of France (as it still calls itself, though, in the matter of population, it is now the third) has been enjoying a little literary excitement on its own account. The manners and customs of the silk merchants of that city have been shown up by one of the members of their own fraternity, who, under the assumed name of Jean Farmer, has not been quite as soft toward his fellow merchants as the material in which they deal. At any rate, "Messieurs les Fabriciens" (B. Grasset) is a witty and amusing book, containing numerous good stories, some true, some fictitious, and at Lyons it is, rightly or wrongly, supposed to be a book à clef, which has led to a great deal of fitting on of caps on more or less suitable heads; but it also may be read with interest and pleasure by persons who have never seen a silkworm or a mulberry leaf.

The history of the Franco-German War is a subject of which Frenchmen never seem to tire. It has been told again by Lieut.-Colonel Rousset (Tallandier), who has supplemented it with "Trente ans d'histoire" (same publisher), bringing the history of France down to 1900. Both volumes are profusely illustrated by reproductions of celebrated works by French artists. In the matter of artistic publications, Messrs. Tallandier are in the front rank. Their historical magazine, Historia (now in its third year), is not only a handsome "table book," illustrated on almost every page with portraits of historical characters and reproductions of famous pictures, but is also valuable to the student of history, the letterpress being furnished by the most eminent writers such as Lenotre, Georges Cain, Henry Bordeaux, Turquan, etc. I should like to see a similar work dealing with English history undertaken by some London house, for even the most austere student does not disdain a work because it is well illustrated.

A few years ago books dealing with "Foreign Authors" would have met with scant success in France. Chauvinists asserted that French literature was the best in the world, and I remember reading in a school textbook that the only two sorts of character that Shakespeare could successfully delineate were a madman and a fool. Such sentiments are now confined to brainless boobies like the "camelots du roi," who, a few months ago, hooted down a lecturer for making some very mild criticism on Corneille—or it might have been Racine, I forget which—and brought loaded sticks wherewith to crack the sconces of possible objectors.

The Sorbonne now insists that every youth who cares to pass his "bachot" shall be examined in some modern language. In too many cases the candidate has only a nodding acquaintance—just sufficient to let him scrape through a very easy exam.—with English or German, and, after it has once served his purpose, relinquishes further attempts to master an odious foreign tongue. But some become fascinated by the literature of the language they were compelled to study, and not only reap their reward but are enabled to point out to their fellow countrymen the merits of some foreign writer. To this end, the neat little volumes issued by Bloud et Cie. have greatly contributed. "Tennyson," by Firmin Roz, has just been added to the series, Chaucer and the Brontë sisters have already been dealt with, and George Meredith, Keats and Carlyle will follow in their turn.

The critical and biographical sketch of Tennyson is highly appreciated, and Firmin Roz is a fervent admirer of the late poet laureate. It is extremely difficult to translate the works of a foreign poet and preserve the melodious cadences of his softer moods, or the rhythmic swing of his stronger verse—in fact, it may be said that only one great poet could translate another. M. Roz, therefore, gives only literal prose translations of passages, the only poems given in full being the "Ode on Wellington," and an excellent rhymed version of "Ring Out, Wild Bells," by Léon Morel. The prose versions render the ideas well, but, of course, the music has fled. The translations are meticulously exact, and M. Roz is evidently well acquainted with our language and literature. I was only able to detect one slight fault. When Tennyson wrote, "Nor ever lost an English gun," he did not mean that Wellington brought back every musket, "et n'a jamais perdu un fusil anglais."

In the same series is a volume on "Pouchkine," by Professor Haumant, of the Sorbonne. I must confess that I know little or nothing about Pouchkine, but should have guessed he was a Russian, and I learn that the Russians claimed him as one of themselves. Prosper Mérimée, however, calls him "the last of the Greeks"; Georges Brandès declared his poetry "smelt of the nigger"; Melchior de Vogüé asserted that he "belonged to the whole of humanity"; whilst to Mickiewicz he appeared to be a "star revolving round the sun of Byron." Perhaps that was not a bad description, for he wrote historical dramas somewhat resembling "Marino Faliero," and a poem called "The Prisoner of the Caucasus," which seems to be getting pretty close to one of Byron's titles. He appears also to have resembled Ovid by getting exiled to the Crimea, and possibly that also was due to his Byronic tendencies. Beyond this I know nothing, and am content to accept Professor Haumant's estimate of the Slavonic poet as "a man who ought to be remembered." K. VOLTAIRE.

AVOID WINDOW REFLECTIONS.

SOME retailers are forever having trouble with reflections in their show windows, and in some instances they find that no end of different plans for eliminating the fault, prove failures. Another retailer, who has never had trouble with reflections, cannot understand why his neighbor has the trouble that he has not. Frequently two dealers with stores directly opposite each other, or with stores side by side, with windows of the same type and with backgrounds of the same material, will find that one has reflection trouble and the other has not. Two men with stores on opposite corners became entangled in a heated argument as to why the value of the windows of the one was so compromised by the reflections while the window of the other were free from the disadvantage. They decided to call in a well known photographer, thinking that his knowledge of the value and source of shadows might enable him to solve the enigma. The problem was easy for the picture-man.

One store was on the north side of the street and the other was on the south. The sun seemed to beat down on the white pavement so close to the windows of the dealer on the north side that it flared up on to the plate glass. Then the flare was caught and reflected back, apparently, by a mirror background. The sun never bothered the dealer whose store was on the south side of the street. The photographer advised a fairly low awning for use at mid-day and a substitution of a dark, dull background for the mirror back. The change was made and it was found to entirely remove the objectionable reflections.

Sometimes, however, the cause of the reflections is so elusive that any amount of figuring fails to find out exactly what will be necessary to remove the fault, and in such cases only repeated trial of various arrangements of awnings, backgrounds, and floor covering can result in the elimination of the reflections. The plate glass or the mirror back, or possibly the dark, or the hardwood, or possibly the white back is the essential that is lacking. Sometimes a low window will catch the glare from the pavement and yet sometimes it is the high window that catches it from no one knows where. Sometimes the direction of the sun's rays itself is the cause, and yet again it is found that the reflection of the light by a building across the street is the cause of the trouble. As a rule the placing of dark background, or of the reverse, a white, dull background, has been found a successful solution of the problem. Again, an awning may be necessary, sometimes a wide one and sometimes a narrow one. Sometimes, where it is essential that some light be admitted to the store through the window, so that a solid background to the window-trim cannot be installed, it has been found that a ground or frosted glass back can be utilized in panels, with a tendency to eliminate reflections.

The problem is elastic, and it is probably as intangible as any of the store detail problems that confronts the retailer, and yet it is one that should be met squarely and solved. The reflecting show window offers a good opportunity for a possible customer to see himself, but with his reflection in full view the chances are good that the goods get little attention. And if the looker be not vain in the least, but really seeks to see the goods displayed, he can see them only imperfectly. Every dealer should see his show windows as others see them. If there are reflections in them that mar their value he should try plan after plan until he removes them. Otherwise the greater part of the value of the window is lost.—Sporting Goods Retailer.

BOOK TRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE first reunion of the Booksellers' League after the summer will be held at the dinner to be given at the Aldine Club, Fifth Avenue and 23d Street, on Wednesday, October 18, at 6:30 P.M. Edward Markham will speak on "What Is Literature?" and the entertainment committee also promise other speakers and a stereopticon lecture on Morocco. Those intending to be at the dinner should notify Charles A. Burkhardt, 31 West 23d Street, before October 16, or they are liable to find no places set for them at the feast. Among recent election to membership are Ernest Barnett (Lemcke & Buechner), H. P. N. Hess (Baker & Taylor Company), Percy E. Lawler (Dodd & Livingston), I. H. Meredith (Tullar-Meredith Company), C. S. Pratt, Charles William Smith, William Spinney (Henry Holt & Company), Miles Standish, and Gabriel Weis.

ENGLISH AS WORLD LANGUAGE.

PROF. ALBERT LEON GUÉRARD of Stanford University, says the New York Evening Post in a paper written for the Popular Science Monthly, dissents from the chorus of voices led by Prof. Brander Matthews proclaiming English the international language of to-morrow. He does so in spite of statistics stating that "one-half of the world's commerce, two-thirds of its shipping, one-fourth of its population, one-half of its railroads, of its newspapers, of its postal transactions, are under the control of the English-speaking countries." There are three ways, he thinks, for a language to achieve universality: political domination, natural development, international agreement. "It was through the political domination of Rome that Latin spread over the whole of the ancient world." But then Rome was almost the sole representative of civilization—a position which it is inconceivable to suppose that the British Empire and America together should ever occupy in this later day. Besides, linguistic domination does not always follow political. More than ever even the smaller nations are fighting to preserve their native tongues.

Professor Matthews, believing that the larger intellectual and financial opportunities of English will lure writers from their own language, mentions Maarten Maartens as an example. To neutralize that sort of evidence, Professor Guérard enumerates several writers of importance who, wholly or in part, have adopted French—"Belgians of Teuton origin, like Verhaeren, Maeterlinck, Rodenbach; Rumanians, like Bolinteano, Hasdeu, Macedonsky, Stourdza, Helen Vacaresco; Greeks like Parodi and Papadiamantopoulos (Jean Moreas); the Cuban José-Maria de Heredia, perhaps the greatest of them all; English poets—Swinburne, Oscar Wilde, Mary Robinson (Mme. Darnesteter-Duclaux); finally true-born Americans—Francis Viele-Griffin from Virginia, Stuart Merrill from Long Island, both doing excellent work." The plea of the natural superiority of English as a language is dismissed not only on the ground of its erratic spelling, but of its "weird consonants, its triphthongized vowels." To be sure, a simplified pronunciation board would help us out "by making it a misdemeanor to pronounce English otherwise than in the scientific, or German, way. After such thorough overhauling, English would stand a little ahead of French, and not too far behind Spanish, Italian, or German in the way of logic and simplicity."

POSTMASTER-GENERAL SUED.

THE Review of Reviews Company, a West Virginia corporation, which publishes the American Review of Reviews, and has its principal offices in New York City, filed Friday in the United States Circuit Court a suit in equity against Frank H. Hitchcock, Postmaster-General, and Edward M. Morgan, postmaster, asking that the defendants be restrained from enforcing the new postal regulation for the forwarding of monthly and bi-weekly periodical publications by fast freight, instead of on regular mail trains, over the territory known as the third contract section, and comprising the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri.

It is claimed that the regulation makes an unlawful discrimination in that it wrongfully divides second-class mail into two classes, and provides for a much slower and inferior method of transportation for periodical publications issued bi-weekly or at longer intervals than is furnished to periodicals issued oftener than bi-weekly.

It is asserted also that such discrimination is specially injurious to the petitioner, because among the weekly publications, to which the recent postal regulation does not apply, are the Outlook and Literary Digest, principal competitors of the American Review of Reviews, in the special field of commenting on current news events.

The petition also asserts that Postmaster-General Hitchcock has "further wrongfully and unlawfully discriminated against petitioner's magazine by arbitrarily exempting from the operation of the regulation for no valid public reason, but for personal or private reasons, a large number of periodical publications, issued monthly, semi-monthly, bi-weekly or at longer intervals, to which speed of transportation are not important at all or less important than to the American Review of Reviews, and has refused such exemption to the petitioner's magazine.

The petition also asks that pending the final determination of the suit a temporary injunction be issued.

OBITUARY NOTES.

HESBA STRETTON, the popular English novelist, died in London on October 9. She was born in 1841, and it is said her name was a pseudonym for Sarah or Hannah Smith. She wrote for Charles Dickens from 1859 until his death, and later wrote stories of religious and philanthropic trend which were translated into many European and some Asiatic languages. Works which every one read a generation ago include "The Clives of Burcot;" "Paul's Courtship;" "The Doctor's Dilemma;" "Hester Morley's Promise;" "Half Brothers;" "Jessica's First Prayer;" "Bede's Charity;" "The Soul of Honor," and "The Highway of Charity."

PHILIP VERRILL MIGHELS, the popular short story writer, accidentally shot himself on October 6 while hunting quail near the Bliss Ranch, Nevada. It was hoped for some days that he might recover, but he died on October 13 after physicians and friends had considered all danger past. Mr. Mighels was born in Carson City, Nevada, in 1869, and was a stepson of Sam Davis, of that city, also a well known writer and former State Comptroller of Nevada. Among Mr. Mighels' best known writings are "Nella, the Heart of the Army;" "When a Witch is Young;" "The Ultimate Passion;" "Chatwit the Man Talk Bird," and he also wrote and dramatized "The Pillars of Eden" and "Bruvver Jim's Baby."

WILLIAM ELEROY CURTIS, one of the most prolific newspaper writers of this country, died suddenly on October 5 from apoplexy, at his apartment at the Bellevue-Stratford, Philadelphia. Mr. Curtis was born at Akron, Ohio, in 1850 and went through the Western Reserve College of Cleveland, Ohio. He became a reporter in 1872, and did some of his best work for the Chicago Record Herald. It is said no newspaper man in the world ever published so many columns, and his writings from all over the world always held the attention of his readers. Among the books Mr. Curtis published are "Capitals of Spanish America;" "The Land of the Nihilist;" "The True Thomas Jefferson;" "The True Abraham Lincoln;" "The Children of the Sun," and "Sixteen Chapters of Spanish America."

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

ARNOLD BENNETT, the author and playwright, arrived on the "Lusitania" last week. While in New York he will be the guest of George H. Doran.

FRANZ CUMONT, author of "Oriental Religions in Roman Paganism," just published by the Open Court Publishing Co., will make a lecture tour in America for the American Committee for Lectures on the History of Religion.

MISS MARY JOHNSTON has just bought a building site of twenty-five acres at Hot Springs, Va. She will begin immediately to build a summer home, which she expects to have ready for occupancy next spring. Miss Johnston has spent much time at the Springs for several summers, and has written "The Long Roll" and some other novels there.

It was rumored last week that Owen Wister, author of "The Virginian," had died on Struther Burt's Ranch in Wyoming, where he has collected material for many of his western stories. The author has now himself reported that he is well and was just starting on a short hunting trip. It is good news that we may still look for more of Owen Wister's distinctive work.

OWING to the efforts of Lady Strachey, the editor of Edward Lear's "The Complete Nonsense Book," a large amount of hitherto unpublished material has been discovered in the possession of Lear's relatives and friends, among whom her own family are numbered. This new material, comprising both pictures and verses, makes hers the only complete edition of Lear. To add to the interest of the volume, which is published by Duffield & Company, Lord Cromer, the famous Egyptian Viceroy, has contributed an introduction.

It was announced last Saturday that Mrs. Louisa Tarkington, wife of Booth Tarkington, the author, had separated from her husband. No suit for divorce has been filed. The cause of the estrangement is said to be Mrs. Tarkington's desire for a domestic life, while her husband's inclinations run in an opposite direction, he preferring to spend his time in New York and Europe. Mrs. Tarkington, through her late father's will, is the possessor of a fortune of $1,000,000, and this she holds in her own name, her brother managing it for her.

PROF. JOHN SPENCER BASSETT, author of "A Life of Andrew Jackson" soon to be brought out by Doubleday, Page & Co. in two large volumes, had access to a vast mass of documents which were carefully written and filed away by Jackson in the conviction that the history of his time should some day be written fully and accurately. This collection of documents had hardly been touched by investigators when Professor Bassett started writing his monumental work, so that their contents will become known to the world for the first time through the biography.

PRESIDENT CHARLES F. THWING's new book, "Universities of the World," puts a girdle around the earth. The institutions treated are those of Oxford, London, Paris, Leyden, Upsala, Madrid, Geneva, Rome, Athens, Berlin, Vienna, Budapest, St. Petersburg, Bucharest, Cairo, Calcutta, Melbourne, Peking, Tokio, and Robert College on the Bosphorus. Each one, with the single exception of Melbourne, the author visited, and the article descriptive of it was written at the time of the visit. The book covers, therefore, a period of many years. It is copiously illustrated.

THE chapter on the present day which Mary MacLane has added to the new edition of "The Story of Mary MacLane," recently published by Duffield & Company, demonstrates that nine years of experience and familiarity with the outside world have not lessened Miss MacLane's power of self-analysis and revelation. She is as defiant of convention, as frankly egotistic, as she was when, a young girl unknown outside of Butte, she astonished the reading public with her book. On many subjects her views have, of course, changed—consistency is not one of her idols—but she has certainly grown no less intense.

R. R. BOWKER, editor of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY and vice-president of the American Copyright League, has had for several years in preparation a book on "Copyright: Its History and Law." This work, the outgrowth from an earlier book on copyright published by Mr. Bowker in 1886, covers the development of copyright from the earliest time through the passage of the new American code of 1909. The fact that during the last year there have been many important changes in the copyright laws of several European countries has delayed the publication of Mr. Bowker's book and also added considerably to its size, but Houghton Mifflin Co. announce that they expect definitely to publish it in November.

It is rumored that Maurice Maeterlinck intends to visit this country next December "incognito." This would seem to be a peculiarly auspicious time from a bookseller's standpoint, as his wife, Mme. Georgette Le Blancé Maeterlinck, is going to appear in "Pélleas and Mélisande"; as "The Blue Bird" is going to tour the country; as the 34th edition of "The Blue Bird" will shortly be issued; as an edition of "The Blue Bird" illustrated by E. Cayley Robinson, whose work is considered by many to be equal to that of Arthur Rackham, will be issued in November; and as "Aglavaine and Selysette," a drama, will be published shortly by Dodd, Mead & Company, who are also the publishers of "The Blue Bird" and all of Maeterlinck's works.

THE outbreak of the war between Turkey and Italy brings the land of the Sultan very prominently before the public, and makes it evident how very few popular writers on modern Turkey are to be had. There are few writers who understand modern Turkey better than Demetra Vaka, whose recent book on the life of Turkish women, "Haremluk," has established a permanent place for itself. Her new book, "In the Shadow of Islam," published most opportunely by Houghton Mifflin Company this week, gives a vivid first-hand picture of the complicated and picturesque political situation in Turkey to-day, while telling at the same time the love story of a young American girl and a leader in the Young Turk movement. Demetra Vaka was born in Constantinople and ran away to America to escape a forced marriage. She has returned, however, several times to her native city and spent the past summer there. She is the wife of Kenneth Kenneth-Brown, an American with whom she collaborated in writing a recent novel called "The Duke's Price."

GEORGE MIDDLETON, in whose plays such distinguished actors as Julia Marlowe, Margaret Anglin and Robert Edson have appeared, is the author of "Ambers, and Other One Act Dramas of Contemporary American Life," which Henry Holt & Company will issue on October 14. The other plays in this book are "The Failures," "The Gargoyle," "In His House," "Madonna," and "The Man Masterful." In these little dramas Mr. Middleton has depicted our fellow-citizens (in a number of cases facing the intimate problems of marriage) with earnestness and force, and his thorough knowledge of stage technique has at the same time made it possible for him to make them actable by clever amateurs. The same firm will issue on October 21 the sixteenth volume of their American Nature Series, being "Plant Life and Evolution," by Professor Douglas H. Campbell, of Stanford University. This book falls into the philosophy of nature group under the special editorship of the well-known naturalist, Professor Vernon L. Kellogg.

A DELIGHTFUL picture of Charles Dickens at Broadstairs is given by G. Egremont in the Westminster Review. For fourteen years Dickens made Broadstairs his principal summer home in England. He would go as early as May, and seems to have stayed as a rule until the middle of October. His residence there coincided with the happiest period of his life. He felt his powers at their amplex when he was at the little Channel coast town. "For a week or a fortnight," he declared, "I can write prodigiously in a retired place (as at Broadstairs)." He is "rushing to Broadstairs" to write that poignant fourth number of "David Copperfield" which contained his own hard childhood experiences. Dickens has given us the best picture of himself at his summer routine: "In a bay-window in a one-pair sits, from nine o'clock to one, a gentleman with rather long hair and no neck-cloth, who writes and grins, as if he thought he were very funny indeed. At one he disappears, presently emerges from a bathing machine, and may be seen, a kind of salmon-colored porpoise, splashing about in the ocean. After that he may be viewed in another bay-window on the ground floor, eating a strong lunch; and after that, walking a dozen miles or so, or lying on his back in the sand reading a book. Nobody bothers him unless they know he is disposed to be talked to; and I am told he is very comfortable indeed. He's as brown as a berry, and they do say is a small fortune to the innkeeper who sells beer and cold punch. But this is mere rumor. Sometimes he goes up to London (80 miles or so away), and then, I'm told, there is a sound in Lincoln's Inn Fields at night, as of men laughing, together with a clinking of knives and forks and wine-glasses."

NOTES ON PERIODICALS.

"MARRIAGE" is the title of a new novel by H. G. Wells that will appear serially in The American Magazine, beginning with the November number.

A. B. SWETLAND, for the past eight years general manager of the Class Journal Company, publishers of the Automobile, Motor Age, Blue Book, and directories, has bought the two weekly publications, the Motor World and Bicycling World and Motorcycle Review, of New York. Mr. Swetland, in addition to his long connection with the Automobile, has had a very extensive publishing experience. For many years he was connected with Power. Joseph Goodman, the former president of the above publications, together with Messrs. Roche, Betts, Wight and the entire staff, remain associated with the publications.

McClure's for 1912 will contain more "Father Brown" detective stories by Gilbert K. Chesterton; a serial novel of American college life entitled "Stover at Yale," by Owen Johnson, famous for his stories of Lawrenceville; "Forces That Will Shape the Future," by George Kibbe Turner, a series of articles on the great powers or inventions now being developed which the author thinks will revolutionize human life, probably within the next ten years; and "Maria Montessori and Her Method," a series of articles dealing with the education of children. "The History of an Amateur Gentleman," by Jeffery Farnol, author of "The Broad Highway," will begin in the April issue.

THE Canadian Bookseller and Stationer reports in a recent issue an excellent fall outlook. "Jobbing houses," it says, "have begun to feel the stimulus of early fall buying, and since early in the month have been busy shipping out orders. School supplies have been moving freely in delivery for the past two months. Fall books are commencing their season a little earlier, and several important works were slated for August publication. The West reports conditions for fall and winter trade excellent. All stationery articles are in demand, and it appears, judging by the way the season is opening out, that the coming months will prove brisk right up to Christmas time."

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE publication of Ralph Connor's "Corporal Cameron" (George H. Doran Co.) has been postponed until 1912, on account of the bookbinders' strike.

ORSAMUS TURNER HARRIS is now connected with Thomas Nelson & Sons. The sale of the Nelson Classics and Great Authors' Library will be under his direction.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY report that it has been necessary to publish new editions of both Robert Hichens' "The Fruitful Vine" and Frances Hodgson Burnett's "The Secret Garden."

THE only new novel written by Jeffery Farnol, since the publication of "The Broad Highway" will be published by Little, Brown & Co. in 1912, after it has appeared serially in McClure's Magazine. It will be called "The Amateur Gentlemen."

"THE Men on Horseback," by Blanche Weitbree, with illustrations by Corinne Turner, just published by Desmond Fitzgerald, is a collection of stories and poems of which the hero in each case is a member of New York's mounted police.

A NEW departure for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is "Songs of the Road," a book of poems which Doubleday, Page & Co. have just published. The poems are grouped under three heads: Narrative Verses and Songs, Philosophic Verses and Miscellaneous Verses.

STURGIS & WALTON COMPANY have just issued a new and cheaper edition of William Edgar Geil's "The Great Wall of China." The edition is identical in text and illustrations with the earlier one and should be welcomed by those to whom the high price of that edition made it prohibitory.

OCTOBER publications of Small, Maynard & Company include "The Marriage Portion: The Mystery of a Man," by Julia Magruder; "The Young Gem Hunters, or The Mystery of the Haunted Camp," a story for boys, by Hugh Pendexter; "The Librarian at Play," by Edmund Lester Pearson; and "Literary Pilgrimages of a Naturalist," by Winthrop Packard.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have just ready two handsome volumes of Tennyson, one "In Memoriam," with an introduction by Stopford A. Brooke and Elizabeth Luther Cary, is illustrated by Frederick Simpson Coburn; the other is "The Princess," with illustrations by the same artist. Both are handsomely bound in dark-blue cloth tooled in gold.

"THE GOOD OLD TIMES" (Brentano's), by Frederick W. Hackwood, is mainly a record of pauperism in England from the Middle Ages to the present. Mixed up with a serious history of humble life and of the various laws and charities dealing with the outcast and disabled, there are many amusing anecdotes and picturesque descriptions from literary sources.

"THE EMPRESSES OF ROME" seem hopelessly at sea for the present at least, Henry Holt & Company having so far been unable to locate the American edition of the book of that title, by Joseph McCabe, which has been shipped from London. If the ladies come to land in time, Henry Holt & Company hope to present them to the public about October 21.

ON October 21, Little, Brown & Co., will publish a new book, "My Ragpicker," by Mary E. Waller, author of "The Wood-carver of 'Lympus.'" It is a sweet and tender story of life in Paris, under the shadow of Notre Dame and at Buttes-Chaumont. Little motherless Nanette, a ragpicker, is the heroine whose "little white soul" is laid bare before the reader.

DODD, MEAD & COMPANY announce that the Harrison Fisher book for 1911, "American Belles," will be ready soon. It has many full-page illustrations beautifully reproduced in four colors from the latest drawings by Mr. Fisher, all of them of American girls, and all of bewitching American girls. They also report a marked success for George Barr McCutcheon's new novel, "Mary Midthorne."

THE PILGRIM PRESS are the publishers of three pretty books for children: "The City that Never was Reached and Other Stories for Children," by Jay T. Stocking; "In Play Land," a collection of prose and poetry, compiled by Frances Weld Danielson, with numerous illustrations; and "Little Animal Stories," compiled by the same person, and containing stories in which animals are the chief actors.

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY have issued a new presentation edition of "The Transfiguration of Miss Philura," by Florence Morse Kingsley. The book is printed in two colors on India tint paper, with four full-page illustrations in color by Ethel Pennewell Brown. This story in its regular edition has had a sale of nearly 100,000 copies and in this more tasteful binding it will undoubtedly meet with a large demand.

FROM D. Appleton & Company, we have received "Cap'n Warren's Wards," by Joseph C. Lincoln, which brings a bluff old Cape Cod sea captain to New York and contrasts him with ultra-fashionable society; and three books for young readers, "Finkler's Field," by Ralph Henry Barbour, a story of baseball and a boys' school; "Charles Dickens and His Girl Heroines," by Belle Moses; and "On the Trail of Grant and Lee," by Frederick Trevor Hill.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL COMPANY have sent us the following books: "The Beauty of Self-Control," by J. R. Miller, author of "The Master's Friendships," two prettily bound, boxed books of poetry, "On Life's Highway," compiled by E. A. Bryant, a volume for girls and youths who have just graduated, and "Poems of Friendship," compiled by John R. Howard; and "Harold, First of the Vikings," by Captain Charles Young, a historical tale for boys.

MAKING ADVERTISING A SCIENCE.—The Association of National Advertising Managers, in the Fifth Avenue Building, has issued the report of its Committee on Education with the title "Can Advertising be Sciencized?" The report deals with the attempt to classify and correlate the results of the experiences of business enterprises into a comprehensive set of principles which can be taught and learned, thus doing away with the haphazard method of individual experience.

THE following were the best sellers with A. C. McClurg & Company during the month of September: Wright, "Barbara Worth"; Chambers, "Common Law"; McCutcheon, "Mary Midthorne"; Porter, "Harvester"; Beach, "Ne'er-Do-Well"; McGrath, "Carpet from Bagdad." Non-fiction: Bennett, "Mental Efficiency"; Schreiner, "Woman and Labor"; White, "The Cabin"; Collier, "West in East." Juvenile: Seton, "Rolf in Woods"; Grinnell, "Trail of Pathfinder"; Brooks, "Dorothy in Mountains."

Two books which the publishers, J. B. Lippincott Company, are confident will sell on sight, are "Joyce of the Jasmines," by Ralph Henry Barbour, a romance of the South, illustrated in color by Clarence F. Underwood, with marginal decorations on each page; and "An Accidental Honey-moon," by David Potter, a breezy story with a fetching heroine and plenty of humor. George W. Gage has made the colored illustrations for this tale. Both books are bound in ornamental cloth and boxed.

To the harassed hostess pondering wearily with herself how to amuse her guests, Miss Mary Woodhouse dedicates her useful and well-thought-out little book, "Drawing-Room Games and Amusements; Together with Games that can be Played in the Garden" (Dutton). The author is a great believer in the ameliorating social effects of a round game, and here gives all kinds of games: Writing Games, Talking Games, Active Games, Trick and Competition Games, Simple Card Tricks, and so forth, under the influence of which the frowning dowager and the timorous girl in her teens alike are likely to lose their stiffness.

THE CENTURY COMPANY have ready, "The Women of the Cæsars," by Guglielmo Ferrero, a brilliant picture of ancient Rome by the author of "The Greatness and Decline of Rome;" "The Man Who Liked Mexico," by Wallace Gillpatrick, a unique and lively chronicle of a Gringo's travels and adventures among the Mexican people; "Four Months in Spain," by Harry A. Frank, author of "A Vagabond Journey Around the World," the record of a trip as full of interest as the other one; "Aesop's Fables," with forty drawings by E. Boyd Smith, and "The Second Boy's Book of Model Aeroplanes," by Francis A. Collins.

THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY have published "Thais," a play in four acts by Paul Wilstach, founded on the novel by Anatole France. The book is illustrated with photographs of the original production at the Criterion Theater, New York, last year. It is the story of a sinning woman who became a saint, of a saintly man who became a sinner, and of the supreme power which ultimately redeemed both. They are also the publishers of a handsome edition of James Whitcomb Riley's poem, "When She Was About Sixteen." The pages are enclosed in ornamental colored borders, and there are many illustrations by Howard Chandler Christy. The cover has a Christy picture in color and the volume comes in a decorated box, making altogether an especially good holiday offering.

JUST as the hunting season in this country opens comes another interesting diary of a sporting holiday from John Lane Company, entitled "Casuals in the Caucasus," by Agnes Herbert. Nowhere else in all the world can be found so myriad-minded and romantic a land, so many sided, so rich in colors, and fertile in forms, and this amusing record of a short holiday, which has for its raison d'être the pursuit of ibex, is full of the suggestive mystery of a primitive environment, and rough-hewn fascination of barbaric peoples. A charming little volume, which leads the readers on a series of delightful excursions into unknown regions, or along well trodden paths, is "The Harlequin Set," by Dion Clayton Calthrop, which John Lane Company also publish this week. That Mr. Calthrop can write with grace and charm was shown by his novel of last summer—"Perpetua."

HARPER & BROTHERS have just published "The Fair Irish Maid," a novel with the scene laid in Ireland, by Justin Huntly McCarthy; "Some Chemical Problems of Today," by Robert Kennedy Duncan; "Jane Dawson," by Will N. Harben, story of a woman of strong, elemental temperament, living her life in a typical Georgia community; "Comrades," by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, a dainty little story of the love of two old people for each other; Don C. Seitz's "Surface Japan: Short Notes of a Swift Journey," illustrated in color by photogravure and marginal sketches after Hokusai; and "The Princess Kallisto and Other Tales of the Fairies," by William Dana Orcutt, and illustrated by Harriette Amsden. "Where the Money Grows," a book by Gareth Garrett, is also announced by the Harpers for immediate publication. It is a presentation, in a series of sketches of Wall Street customs and superstitions. Mr. Garrett, by his light style, gives the outsider a picturesque view of the human side of the money-gatherers.

THE following books will be published by Houghton Mifflin Company on Saturday, October 14: "Tarantella," a stirring novel of Italy, by Edith Macvane, author of "The Black Flier"; "Life and Times of Cavour," an important and authoritative biography of the great Italian statesman, by William R. Thayer, the author of "The Dawn of Italian Independence"; "Two Boys in a Gyrocar," a story of a New York to Paris automobile race, by K. Kenneth-Brown; "Girls and Education," by Le Baron R. Briggs, president of Radcliffe College; "An American Railroad Builder: John Murray Forbes," by Henry G. Pearson; "Democracy and Poetry," by Professor Francis B. Gummere, of Haverford College; "History and Organization of Criminal Statistics of the United States," by Louis N. Robinson; "The Fall of the Year," by Dallas Lore Sharp, the first of a new series of Nature Readers for children; and "Readings in English Prose of the Eighteenth Century," edited by Raymond M. Alden. They also report that the demand for Henry S. Harrison's novel, "Queed," continues unabated, and the editions have now reached a total of 83,000 copies.

AMONG Charles Scribner's Sons latest books are: "The Outcry," by Henry James, which proves again his pre-eminence among the writers of analytical fiction; and "Spanish Sketches," by Edward Penfield. With his pen and his brush Mr. Penfield, so thoroughly successful in his "Holland Sketches," has here caught and reproduced the very life and spirit of Spain. He expresses vividly the charm of that romantic land, so full of grace, beauty, and color. People who, in view of the Italian-Turkish War, wish for a clear idea not only of the politics of Northern Africa and particularly of Tripoli, but for the nature of the life there, and of the people, and of the commercial situation and its possibilities, will find all such things and a great many others told in a clear and most entertaining manner by Charles W. Furlong in his recent book, "The Gateway to the Sahara." It is an unusually thorough book, and well supplemented with thirty-six full-page illustrations, four of them in color, and with many maps and drawings, and photographs by the author himself. On its publication it became the standard work on Tripoli and the country about it, and until now it has remained the standard work.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY have ready the following books: "J. L. M. Curry, a Biography," by Edwin Anderson Alderman and Armistead Churchill Gordon, a life of the man who served the Confederate States ably and well and then when the war was over put aside all sectional feeling and served the Union as a member of Congress. He was general agent for the Peabody Education Fund for more than twenty years. Merritt W. Harper's "Manual of Farm Animals," a practical guide to the choosing, breeding and keep of horses, cattle, sheep and swine; "Puppets, a Work-a-day Philosophy," by George Forbes; and "Great Religious Teachers of the East," by Alfred W. Martin, Associate Leader of the Society for Ethical Culture of New York.

BOOKS WANTED

Under this head booktrade subscribers, under their own names, are given five nonpareil lines (exclusive of address) free advertisement for books out of print in any issue except special numbers, but not exceeding 100 lines a year. If over five lines are sent the excess is at 10 cents a line. Books not out of print, repeated matter, and all advertisements from nonsubscribers cost 10 cents a line. Objectionable books are excluded so far as they are noted.

In answering, please state edition, condition and price, including postage or express charges. Houses that will deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis should put [Cash] after their firm name. The appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the WEEKLY, does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it endeavors to safeguard its columns by withdrawing their use from irresponsible advertisers, booksellers should take usual precautions in extending credit.

Write your wants plainly, on one side of the sheet only. Illegible "wants" are ignored. The WEEKLY is not responsible for errors. Parties with whom there is no account must pay in advance.

"BAIT"

For Holiday Book Buyers

In Book Selling as in Fishing, Attractive Bait is one of the essentials to win success

IN the early fall of the year every live bookseller considers plans for his holiday catalog, his best means of attracting Christmas Book Buyers. The question with him is how to make his Christmas announcements with dignity and effect without spending too much time and money in the production of an attractive catalog.

The problem is fully solved by "The Christmas Bookshelf" (the Christmas number of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY) with the dealer's own imprint. It is a magazine-catalog of about 240 pages, copiously illustrated with specimen illustrations from the best books of the year. It contains a most attractive assemblage of the best new issues of all the publishers, with ample descriptive notices. A feature is the carefully prepared purchase list, which, with the publishers' own advertisements, gives a comprehensive survey of about all a bookseller would be likely to keep in stock during the holiday season.

It is a Christmas Catalog your customers would feel flattered in receiving!

The price, for editions with the bookseller's own imprint, is based on cost of paper and press work only, without counting cost of composition, and is, therefore, much below the cost of a catalog made by any bookseller for himself.

We remind you that it is necessary to have orders early, so as to regulate the size of the edition. Last year several belated orders came after printing was completed and the edition sold.

We will be glad to send you a sample copy of last year's issue on request.
